POL G. THEIS

Before Pol G. Theis founded his 14-year old boutique design firm, he was a corporate lawyer based in Luxembourg and Paris. That might explain the extreme architectural discipline of his interiors, each of which features unexpected materials and a signature, edgy mix of furnishings, art, and accessories. Whether designing a city dwelling or beach house sanctuary, each residence has a contemporary flavor with a glamorous, dusky overtone. His newest projects include several residences in Connecticut and in the Hamptons.

An award-winning architect who gravitates towards traditional architecture and historic preservation, Peter Pennoyer is equally fluent in the language of classicism and the artistry of contemporary design. Before founding his present firm in 1991, he had independent commissions that included artist Keith Haring's Pop Shop on Lafayette Street and renovations to The Warhol Factory. Current projects include a collaboration with Turquoise Mountain—a non-profit organization that specializes in urban generation for Afghanistan—to create custom lattice screens (fabricated in Afghanistan) for a house in upstate New York. He is also co-authoring a book with his wife, Katie Ridder, scheduled to hit bookstores in September 2016.

ROBERT COUTURIER INC.

ROBERT COUTURIER

New York, NY 10012

Robert Couturier rose to fame in 1987 after being commissioned to design billionaire financier's Sir James Goldsmith's massive, 20,000-acre compound on the Pacific Coast of Mexico. Since then, the designer's extensive training in multifarious decorative styles has yielded him numerous and varied projects, many on a grand scale. The common thread throughout is a seemingly unattainable level of sophistication layered with a bit of fantasy. As always, Couturier is a busy man: his current projects include a major artist's townhouse in New York City, private residences in NYC, and a presidential suite for a famous seaside resort in Mexico.
