All quiet on the western front

With a photo collection of coiled snakes on the wall, Elton John's master bedroom has a distinctly "southwest" feel to it. We heart the bed—upholstered in python skin—the white cowhide rug and the faux antelope head.

Nordic nummies

Copenhagen's Noma, with its personal rendition of Nordic cuisine and ambitious menu of little-known ingredients, is now "the" place for travel foodies. This year, it beat out Spanish icon El Bulli for the number one spot on Restaurant Magazine's world's best list so, when in Denmark...

Window shopping

Le Corbusier's LC4 Chaiselounge was first on display at the Salon d'Automne art exhibition in 1929. Now, replicas are manufactured in Italy and can be found in Toronto. (See page 42.)

Twinkle, twinkle

Swarovski's crystal, as seen in Ocean's Thirteen, is used densely with an internal light to form a magical chandelier that, according to the designer, belongs "in the ice palace of a fairy queen."

Light my fire

Warm up a cool living room with a hot new wood-burning stove. The skinny on Zo, this marvellous Italian piece, is that it fits seamlessly into nearly any interior and swivels 360°.

A blood-red spectacle

Mosaic Italian glass tiles in red, yellow and orange line the interior of the pool at The Library in Koh Samui, Thailand. The result is a dazzling spectacle and earns a coveted spot on Triphulvisor's list of the world's 10 most amazing pools.
