New+Next / TREND

TREND The words "summer afternoon," Henry James once wrote, are the two most beautiful in the English language. Little Rock designer Tobi Fairley might argue with him that "pineapple martinis" is an even more appealing linguistic twosome. "My favorite vacation memory is drinking them while watching the sun set with my hubby at Mama's Fish House on Maui," she says.

Maybe they're both right. After all, sipping and summer afternoons go together like sunscreen and beaches. Whatever your travel or stay-at-home style, we've scouted finds to help you make the most of these lazy, hazy days. Believe it or not, each fabric swatch and furnishing shown is made of weather-worthy material—even the striking metallic architectural elements, below.

Rock On! Available in 16 colors, this rocker by Richard Schultz, $2,250, is based on his iconic 1966 Collection (richardschultz.com).

Rose Reversal

Yellow roses aren't just for Texas interiors. On this bed-linen ensemble from Kate Spade, oversized depictions of the beloved blooms coexist with bold stripes. If flowers aren't your thing, not to worry: The duvet reverses. A mini lattice pattern in green and white decorates the sheets. Available at Bed Bath & Beyond.

Links Logic Game off? Put your clubs to rest in these quilted "Casablanca" covers, $89; Cinda B (cindab.com).
Cushioned Comfort Trina Turk's pillows, from $138 each, wear geometrics just like those on her fashionable frocks; Peking Handicraft (pkhc.com).

Decorative Relief Nine metallic finishes make these elegant moldings tolerant of all weather; Enkeboll (enkeboll.com).

with outdoor fabrics like a black-and-white toile or a bold striped print. Or give your outdoor spaces barefoot brilliance with tropical flowers blooming in a lime field, as on the "Fiji Lemonade" rug by Company C for Layla Grayce.

A weather-resistant étagère is just the place to perch treasures from your travels. And San Francisco designer Grant K. Gibson is the ideal enabler. "I tell clients to shop while they vacation," he says. "It's the perfect time to pick up a great piece of art by an undiscovered local artist or a beautiful bowl or coffee-table book. On my recent trip to Colombia, I bought textiles to make pillows for a client." Shopping abroad. What fun on a summer afternoon! ➤

Who's Going Where

Want to know where our favorite designers are headed this summer? For New York-based Jennifer Flanders, the City of Light is hard to beat. "I love the sights, sounds, and smells of Paris," she says. Also from New York, Benjamin Bradley's destination of choice is The Grand Hotel Excelsior Vittoria in Sorrento, Italy. Washington D.C.-based Erin Pitts's "love affair" with California makes it the spot where she'll direct her family this summer. —Clara Haneberg
