

WHAT'S NEW

HANG 'EM HIGH

The Bowery collection of curtain rods from the Shade Store is capable of side, wall or ceiling mounting and is available in three stylish finishes—smoke, espresso and java—and four unique finials: tapon, crown (shown), top or torch. Price upon request, theshadestore.com.

AU NATUREL

Choice of wood is always the starting point for Biaki, and when it came to the Nara door (pictured here), straight-grain Douglas fir was the winner. Coated in Biaki's signature clear finish and capped with a polished brass border, the Nara's simplistic design gives way to an ultra-contemporary look. Price upon request, biakiny.com.

LOCK OF TOMORROW

The Kevo 2nd Gen touch-to-open smart lock is slated for release later this spring, as an upgraded version of the already-successful Kwikset Kevo 1st Gen smart lock. The DIY smart lock allows keyless entry for homeowners through a smartphone app, guest e-keys, scheduled e-keys and a plethora of options for integrated home appliances. Price upon request, through Lowe's, lowes.com, kwikset.com.

CRACK THE CODE

The Camden knob from Waterworks drew its utilitarian-inspired design from the hand-finished facets of antique safes, keeping an industrial look and feel, while emanating elegance. $175, waterworks.com.

NOW YOU SEE ME

Inspired by 1930s glass switches, the Invisible Lightswitch from Forbes & Lomax sits on a three-millimeter transparent acrylic plate and is secured without the use of screws. Finishes include brass, nickel silver, stainless steel or antique bronze toggle switches, dimmer knobs and push buttons, as well as a selection of invisible outlets. $95, forbesandlomax.com.
